Abby

MIRROR

Abby is a decorative mirror composed of two symmetrical parts placed side by side. The composition creates a broad, striking presence, designed to stand on the floor close to a wall and become an integral part of the architecture of the ambience.

In the living area, Abby visually enhances the sense of space and introduces a generously proportioned reflective surface. It can also be placed near an entrance combining functionality and decorative aim.

The frame is made of glass cast into slabs by master glassmakers in the Venice area. The handcrafted process gives the glass surface an uneven texture that contrasts with the regularity of the central mirror.

The texture of the glass visually evokes ripples on the sea. Light meets a subtly uneven surface, creating reflections and variations that change with the viewing angle, like small movements captured within the material.

The meeting of the two symmetrical parts creates a precise balance, while the glass surface introduces a freer, more vibrant quality. Geometric order and textural irregularity thus coexist within the same design.

Abby is also available in a smaller rectangular version, allowing the collection’s design language to suit different proportions and interior settings.

Abby interprets HESSENTIA’s exploration of Venetian artistic glass through a contemporary mirror whose frame becomes a textured surface that captures light, reflections and traces of the handcrafted process.
