Gister

WRITING DESK

Gister is a contemporary desk defined by rounded, unconventional shapes that extend across both the desktop and the legs. The continuity of the curves creates a fluid, dynamic silhouette that introduces movement into the workspace.

Its outline moves beyond the rigidity of the traditional rectangular desk, developing a softer geometry. The desktop and supports appear to emerge from the same gesture, guiding the eye along a composition without pronounced sharp edges.

The generous desktop provides a functional surface for a study or home office. Two integrated drawers allow essential items to be organised, keeping the composition tidy while preserving the continuity of the design.

The texture of the metal, with the tonal variations and irregularities characteristic of handcraftsmanship, contrasts with the flawless, uniform lacquered surface.

Gister is available in different colours coordinated with metal details. The wide range of available colours allows the desk to take on a more discreet or more assertive presence according to the interior design scheme.

Its proportions and fluid lines make it suitable for both a dedicated study area and the living area, where the desk can be perceived as part of the furniture composition as well as a functional workspace.

Gister interprets the HESSENTIA home office through curves, colour and integrated functionality. Its soft, contemporary design language complements the everyday act of working.
