MIRROR

Bali is a contemporary mirror defined by a concrete frame and an amorphous shape that departs from the regularity of traditional geometric forms. Its irregular outline gives the mirror a sculptural look, where material and shape are perceived as parts of the same design.

The frame is shaped by HESSENTIA's skilled artisans using a handcrafted process. Concrete thus takes on a more expressive character, moving beyond its architectural origins to become a decorative material.

The shape does not follow an entirely predictable outline. Curves and variations run around the mirror, softening its rigidity and creating a contrast between the solidity of concrete and the visual lightness of the reflective surface.

The tactile presence of the frame underlines Bali's character even when the mirror is viewed from an angle. The concrete creates depth around the reflective surface and gives the piece an almost monolithic character, softened by its irregular outline.

In Bali, a material traditionally associated with architecture is reinterpreted through craftsmanship. Concrete becomes more than a structural element: it is the defining feature of the mirror's identity.

Bali expresses HESSENTIA's exploration of textured concrete through an accessory in which amorphous shapes, surface texture and handcraftsmanship transform the mirror into a decorative element suitable for contemporary interiors.
