SOFA

Within the HESSENTIA world, Bloom sofa interprets defined geometries through volumes that are simultaneously soft and welcoming. The design belongs to Bloom collection, which also includes the coordinated armchair, and develops a language capable of balancing formal order and comfort.

The inspiration from 1950s sofas is reinterpreted through contemporary proportions and more generous surfaces. The shapes retain a recognizable geometric clarity but are softened by the upholstery, avoiding a rigid perception of the structure.

This sofa is available in different sizes and with leather or fabric upholstery. The possibility of choosing configuration and upholstery allows the design to adapt to contemporary living spaces of different sizes and characteristics.

The relationship with the armchair from the same collection also makes it possible to create a coordinated living set through products that shares design, proportions, softness and a reference to 1950s design.

Handmade in Italy, Bloom interprets design memory through geometric volumes, softness and contemporary proportions, transforming the reference to the 1950s into a measured, current presence.
