Jill

CHAIR

Jill is a contemporary chair inspired by 1970s design, reinterpreted through a solid iroko structure and a construction system that reveals the joints between its different parts.

The design arises from the meeting of vertical and horizontal wooden elements, assembled in a clear, recognisable layout. The connection remain exposed as part of the chair's identity, highlighting precision of construction and the quality of craftsmanship.

Iroko gives the structure warmth, solidity and natural surface variations: its grain and wood tones contribute to define the seat's identity, making each piece one of a kind.

Slender proportions and a tall backrest create a light yet clearly recognisable look. The upholstered seat introduces comfort and tactile depth, balancing the solidity of the wooden structure.

Jill is available with a wide range of upholstery: fabric or leather versions retain a more restrained character and highlight the wood design, while Mongolia fur gives it a softer, more irregular and visually striking appearance.

Designed for dining rooms, living areas, restaurants and hospitality projects, Jill interprets the contemporary chair through cabinetmaking, design heritage and material quality.

Handmade in Italy, it brings together solid wood craftsmanship, comfort and precision of connection, making the structure an expressive part of the design.
