Yari

FLOOR LAMP

Yari is a contemporary floor lamp in which the precision of the metal base meets the softness of hand-blown glass. The composition is composed of a few simple elements, defined through craftsmanship that focuses attention on the material and details.

The upper glass element is hand-blown by Venetian master glassmakers. The volume takes on a soft, rounded shape, creating an immediate contrast with the more linear metal structure beneath it.

Coloured murrine are embedded within the glass. These small elements interrupt the continuity of the transparent surface and introduce variations in colour that make the glass more dynamic and distinctive.

The murrine connect Yari to the Venetian glass craft tradition, making decoration an integral part of the material. Colour and transparency coexist within the same volume, changing in appearance with the light and viewing angle.

The metal base supports the upper glass element through a more rigorous geometry. The contrast between the solidity of the structure and the visual lightness of the glass creates an almost suspended composition, evoking a hot-air balloon ready to rise.

Yari expresses HESSENTIA's exploration of lighting through a dialogue between metal, Venetian blown glass and murrine. Shape, colour and craftsmanship transform simple materials into a luminous presence with an immediately recognisable character.
