Bridge

STORAGE UNIT

This version of Bridge develops a more enclosed, material-focused configuration, distinct from the fully open storage unit in the same collection. Its proportions remain strongly horizontal, while rounded corners soften the geometry and complement the elongated volume.

In the mother-of-pearl finish version, the surface acquires a variable luminosity that changes with the light and viewing angle. Delicate reflections move across the front while preserving its continuity.

The open compartments are finished internally in metal. This material transition emphasises the depth of the openings, introducing a clear contrast between the exterior and interior space.

The top is available in a selection of marbles. In the larger version, the slabs can be bookmatched, transforming the stone's veining into a mirrored pattern across the surface.

The natural uniqueness of marble thus meets the luminosity of mother-of-pearl and the precision of metal. Each material responds differently to light, creating a composition that changes gently with the ambience.

In HESSENTIA's interpretation, Bridge expresses contemporary storage unit through horizontal shape, luminous surfaces and an exploration of materials, creating a more intimate, tactile presence than the open version.
