Chopper

RUG

Generated: 24/11/2026

Chopper is a contemporary rug made entirely by hand using the hand-tufting technique, defined by irregular shapes and a pile with different heights. The surface thus gains depth, giving the rug a three-dimensional look within the space.

Variations in pile height create reliefs that change the perception of rug. Light meets different levels and creates subtle shadows, changing the rug's appearance according to the viewing angle.

The three-dimensional effect arises directly from the textile construction rather than being applied as decoration. Tufting allows the pile to be shaped, making variations in height and density distinctive elements of the design.

The irregular geometric shape allows Chopper to move beyond the traditional rectangular shape. Its outline appears to expand freely into the space, creating a more fluid relationship with sofas, armchairs and coffee tables.

Material and design thus become inseparable. The relief can be perceived both visually and through touch, giving the surface a presence that changes with the light and the observer's position.

Chopper brings a focused exploration of surface to HESSENTIA's textile design: hand tufting, varying pile heights and irregular shapes transform the rug into a tactile landscape of reliefs, shadows and depth.
