Within the HESSENTIA world, Rubik sofa translates the language of the collection into a linear configuration defined by squared volumes and a metal base that keeps the upholstered structure raised from the floor. The base visually lightens the composition and creates a precise contrast with the more compact presence of the seat.

The entire outer structure is decorated with cordonetto embroidery, composed of horizontal and vertical stitching that draws the surface and emphasizes the sofa's geometry. The same workmanship is repeated on the decorative cushions, creating continuity between the different upholstered elements.

Available in different sizes, this sofa can be upholstered in leather or fabric. Its defined configuration brings the character of the collection into living areas that require a linear seating solution without the need to build a modular system.

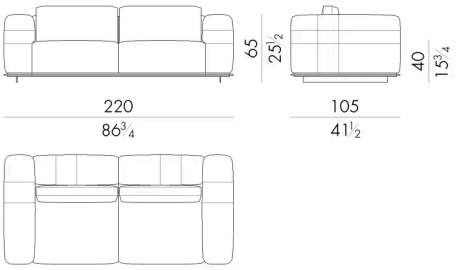

Handmade in Italy, Rubik interprets comfort through geometric volumes, the lightness of the metal base and cordonetto tailoring workmanship, making the upholstery an active component of the product's identity.
