Raphi is a contemporary chair with a minimal, restrained design, conceived to offer comfort and visual lightness through the dialogue between upholstery and solid wood.

The upholstered seat and backrest define an enveloping profile designed to follow the body and provide support. Balanced proportions make Raphi suitable for dining areas, meeting rooms, restaurants and contemporary hospitality projects.

The structure is made of solid Canaletto walnut wood, characterised by deep grain and natural colour variations. The four expertly crafted legs are connected by a cross-shaped structure that becomes one of the most recognisable design features.

The cross-shaped element stabilises the structure and gives the chair visual lightness, creating the impression that the upholstered seat is suspended. The relationship between solid volumes and open spaces reveals the chair's construction and enhances the wood craftsmanship.

The softness of the seat and backrest creates a harmonious contrast with the precision of the wooden base. Fabric or leather upholstery can be customised to match with the table, ambience and interior design requirements.

Handmade in Italy, Raphi interprets the contemporary chair through Canaletto walnut wood, comfort and clarity of construction. Cross-shaped element transforms a structural component into a distinctive design feature.
