Within the HESSENTIA world, Cliff sofa brings the comfort principle that defines the collection into a linear configuration. The identity of the design is focused on the adjustable back, composed of a cushion whose inclination can be modified to adapt support to the desired position.

Adjusting the back changes the relationship between the body, the seat and the support without altering the overall shape of the sofa. Comfort is therefore not entrusted solely to the softness of the upholstery, but becomes a design component capable of responding to different sitting positions.

Unlike the modular version, Cliff sofa interprets this principle through a defined configuration, conceived for interiors where a complete seating solution is required without the need to build a modular system.

This sofa is available upholstered in leather or fabric and has fully removable covers. The choice of upholstery changes the tactile and chromatic perception of the product while preserving its strong identity.

Handmade in Italy, Cliff sofa combines adjustable comfort, linear proportions and versatility of upholstery, transforming the movable back into the functional and recognizable signature of the collection.
