Phaos

CHANDELIER

Phaos is a chandelier with minimal geometric design, created through the meeting of handcrafted artistic glass and hammered brass. Two different materials are brought together through artisanal processes that make their surfaces immediately recognisable.

The glass is handmade by master glassmakers in the Venice area. This craftsmanship brings Italy's artistic glass tradition into the composition and makes the material central to the lamp's identity.

The brass is also hammered by hand: its metal surface acquires a rhythm of subtle variations that respond to light.

The relationship between glass and brass creates a clear contrast, where the luminous quality of the glass meets the more textured presence of the hammered metal, while the geometric purity of the structure keeps the two design languages in balance.

LED light enhances this encounter, revealing the worked surfaces in different ways and making the transition between transparency and material presence apparent.

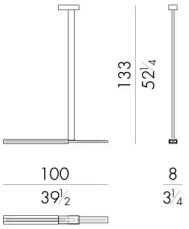

Phaos expresses contemporary lighting through two artisanal processes: the work of master glassmakers and the hammering of brass. It brings together simple geometry and the Made in Italy tradition of working with materials.
